About the Author and JS GP

Rajeev Malhotra, born in Kalpa (Himachal Pradesh), is a Professor at the Jindal School of Government and Public Policy (JS GP) and Executive Director, Centre for Development and Finance at the O.P. Jindal Global University, Haryana. He is a development economist and a civil servant with over two decades of experience of working on development policy issues. He was Economic Adviser to the former Union Finance Minister of India (Mr. Pranab Mukherjee) and has earlier worked at the Planning Commission of India and the United Nation's office in Geneva. He has published widely on issues relating to poverty estimation, human development, human rights indicators and the Indian economy. He was the lead author of the first National Human Development Report, Planning Commission (OUP 2002) and has edited and contributed to A Critical Decade: Policies for India's Development (OUP 2012).

Jindal School of Government and Public Policy (JS GP) offers India's first postgraduate programme in public policy, an interdisciplinary course of two years' duration, designed to equip students with skills and knowledge to grasp contemporary economic, social and political challenges and to find solutions to persistent development problems. JS GP promotes research aimed at improving the understanding of public policy issues and support an informed policymaking process. It promotes international collaborations befitting a global programme of high quality. JS GP is a member of a select group of international public policy schools (including Harvard University, Sciences Po, University of Oxford, Tsinghua University, Central European University, and some others), participating in the Open Society Foundation's Rights and Governance Internship Programme. JS GP has an outstanding faculty to equip its students to pursue successful and adventurous careers in different spheres of public life.

India Public Policy Report 2014

'India is going through a tremendous structural transformation that is changing its economic, political and social dynamics. The ... controls on initiative and entrepreneurship ... [are] getting replaced by the restless energy and the rising expectations of India's youth and business. There is mobilisation of people on issues that affect the society at large. ...

India cannot afford to miss this huge opportunity that its youthful population presents, even to swim against the tide and join the ranks of developed nations in the not-too-distant future.'

India Public Policy Report (IPPR) is aimed at helping create an independent platform for bringing together research on topical issues of policy relevance for India. The report:

- focuses on strengthening a culture of evidence-based policymaking anchored in rigorous research;
- presents a framework for objective assessment of policy effectiveness, particularly for use in developing countries; and
- presents a methodology for periodic assessment and analysis of public policy options, choices exercised and performance at state level in India, with a view to improve policy outcomes and their developmental impact.

Poverty, hunger and malnutrition – the three development issues that have been serious concerns in the context of the country – constitute the theme for IPPR 2014. The report reflects on policy advocacy needs and contributes towards improving public policymaking and its implementation process in the country.
