SESSION-II

RESEARCH GRANTS AND FUNDING: STEPS, PROCESSES AND STRATEGIES

ABSTRACT

Drawing upon their experience at the Central Research Grants and Contracts Office, King's College London, the session panellists will provide an overview of the processes involved in preparing a research grant application for submission to external funders. The different processes and stages involved in developing and submitting an application will be discussed including identifying the appropriate funding, reading the funding call for applications, preparing the application documents, and understanding the different funder submission systems.

BIO OF SPEAKERS

DANIELA AMADIO

Daniela Amadio is the Head of Research Grants at King's College London. She leads a central pre-award department that supports academics attracting research income from a variety of national and international funding sources. The department is responsible for approving research budgets, signing off awards and negotiate collaboration agreements with partners, and manage any contractual amendments during the life-time of any project.

RASANGIKA PELPOLA

Rasangika Pelpola is leading the team responsible for the smooth running of all EC and US government funding applications and projects at King's College London. Including working with head of Pre-Award on future strategies in research funding: anticipate trends, investigate risks and opportunities and guide senior leadership accordingly.

CLAUDIA CAMPANELLA

Claudia Campanella is working as part of the Pre-Awards team at King's College London, advising and supporting the Dickson Poon School of Law, the Faculty of Arts and Humanities and the King's Business School in submitting compliant and high-quality applications to UK Research Councils and national and international charities.
