UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD, UK

“The QS World Rankings of universities provide one of the most widely respected, objective, assessments of how universities rank amongst their peers. It is fantastic news that JGU has been ranked among the top 800 universities globally, within just ten years of its founding. It is the youngest university of its kind to reach this position, and that is a great accolade. I know JGU and some of its faculty personally. From my perspective at one of the world’s oldest and most highly ranked universities – Oxford – I know what immense resources it takes to build and maintain the esteem of alumni, students and the world. I have seen at first hand, at JGU, the energy and creativity that its faculty pour into building up this university into a very special, world-class institution. I have also seen the enthusiastic loyalty of the students, who have learned at JGU that they can aspire to the highest standards. Recently I was proud to welcome a young JGU graduate to a prestigious scholarship in law at Oxford, where she won a distinction in her postgraduate course. She is only one example of the way in which JGU helps its graduates to realise their highest ambitions. I send my warmest congratulations to Chancellor Naveen Jindal and Vice Chancellor C. Raj Kumar, and to all the faculty, for the vision, the passion and the leadership that they have brought to building this exceptional institution. I expect to see JGU rise further each year in the QS rankings.”
